

The Latest "All-in-One" Styling Tool of 2011

Last month I had the amazing opportunity of having a sneak peek at the latest styling tool created by Kadori, which is coming out holiday season of 2010. The iron was so easy to work with and really tended to my needs with the different styles I used it on both in the salon as well as at home.

Upon hearing I was going to get this opportunity I was extremely excited. Who wouldn't be thrilled to try something new and improved that few have yet had the privilege of trying yet alone seeing? As soon as the iron arrived, I opened up the package and as soon as I saw the tool, my excitement went through the roof. The packaging itself was amazing! Catching to the eye from the outside, I flipped open the box to reveal the extremely trendy and attractive, newest, updated Kadori styling tool.

Kadori, from what I have come to learn through some research of my own, has many different patterns that they put on the tools as they come out into the market. The one I received was the cheetah print...cha-ching!

Finally getting to use the iron the next day, I fell in love. Let me give you a few reasons why:

- 1.) While using the iron on my guests, I never had any problem moving around the chair and never had to reposition my guest so that they could not see themselves in the mirror. The cord is an amazing 10 foot swivel cord allowing me to style with comfort and my guest to know what is going on behind the chair the entire time.
- 2.) As I was using the iron I noticed that I never saw a single crease in the hair while straightening or curling. (That's right I said curling! We will get to that point in a second.) The reason for this is because the plates are movable, as well as being ceramic, allowing equal heat distribution to the hair and maintaining an even temperature throughout the entire time you are using the tool. They are flexible, floating plates that are suspended and move as you style allowing the iron to run through the hair smoothly and easily without tugging, breaking or creasing the hair. The advanced ceramic plates, being suspended as they are, also enable you to achieve multiple looks with one simple tool! No more lugging around multiple irons to the salon, fashion shows or vacations because this one does it all! You can straighten, wave and curl the hair all with one tool. I'm sold.
- 3.) The next thing I noticed was how convenient it was to control the temperature of the iron. By pushing the plus and minus buttons on the iron, you can control it all the way up to 450 degrees! And all you stylists know what that means – it can be used in conjunction with the many keratin and straightening treatments in the salons now that require an iron with this heat! Another reason to consider this iron you're all in one styling tool.

After using this iron for one day on my guests, I had people asking me where they could purchase it and how to find it. This iron is currently sold in salons only, but will hopefully be more readily available with beauty suppliers as well.

I love the iron. It's light weight, easy to use, it has an automatic 60 minute sleep mode system, it uses far infrared heat and negative ions to soften and smooth the hair keeping it shinier and frizz – free. I feel extremely comfortable recommending this iron to professionals and individuals with every hair texture and need and look forward to what Kadori comes out with next!
